FROM THE CANTOR

I was shopping at the local supermarket the other day and picked up a copy of the complimentary Passover Haggadah. This year's version is brand new and clearly in a more contemporary style. For starters, many of the important parts of the Haggadah are now offered in transliteration. There is also a feature called "The Steps of the Seder" which outlines the order of the evening and tells you, on each page, precisely where you are in the scheme of things. The typography is also crisper and cleaner looking.

But wait! Some things are missing! Where are the pictures of the 4 children that usually accompany the text? I like to study the artist's depiction of the wise, wicked, simple, and the one who doesn't know how to ask. And where are the pictures of the pious rabbis sitting around discussing the story of the exodus late into the night. Even the crossing of the sea is no longer depicted! Instead, all we have are simple graphics of wine cups, grapes, leaves, matzahs and the like. And at the end of the Haggadah, the editors apparently opted for spatial efficiency by eliminating all the repetition in the verses of Echod Mi Yodea and Chad Gadyah. I suppose they needed to make room for their centerfold, which contains...coupons! Yes, you open this booklet, a central work of Jewish liturgy, and you get coupons! Now, it should not really distract us from the recitation of the Haggadah because presumably the coupons would have been removed and used well before the Seder night. But then, they'd be used only if you were a fan of chocolate covered jelly rings, marshmallows and a particular brand of sardines or gefilte fish. But I don't mean to complain. The centerfold with the coupons and advertisements can readily be removed without much trouble at all, and anyway, who doesn't appreciate a good deal on macaroons? And let's not forget that the fine folks at the supermarket are offering the Haggadahs as a complimentary gift to their Jewish customers, so a good measure of gratitude is in order.

Nevertheless, from a traditionalist perspective, I was at first mildly disappointed with the changes in this Haggadah. But spending a little time with this new version, it has definitely grown on me, and I appreciate that its user-friendliness may well appeal to the modern, contemporary seder-goer. Anyway, at the end of the day, or night, it's not so much what the Haggadah brings to the seder table that matters, but what we bring—our curiosity and our questions, our ideas and our interpretations, our spirit and our joy. It is a night to celebrate freedom-- to contemplate what exactly freedom means, and the ways to fully appreciate it. It's a night to be with family and friends, and of course, to enjoy a delicious holiday meal.

I wish everyone a Chag Kasher v'Sameach. May this be a joyous Passover for you and our brothers and sisters everywhere!

Cantor Steven Stern

FROM THE PRESIDENTS

The Conservative Movement, in which TBO/BT is a partner, is in the midst of restructuring and rethinking the road to accomplishing its mission. As your co-Presidents, we attended meetings and read many e-mails outlining the process.

Some of what we do know about the rethinking of the parent body is that they want the congregations to be known as Kehillahs. We assume it's a broader definition, perhaps indicating a wider scope of thinking about our congregations' character and practices. Kehillah—translates into community.

Guess what?

If Kehillah represents a broader view of service to our own community and to the larger Jewish community, then TBO/BT is way ahead of the curve. As a congregation, coming into our 54th triple chai year, we have always strived to be a Kehillah, a warm congregation, that has served the Jewish community in many diverse ways. Most importantly by embracing each other as family.

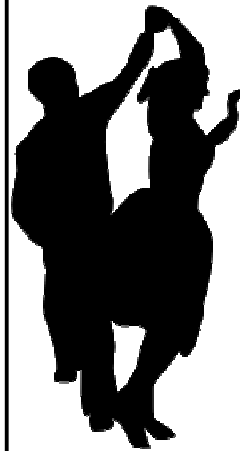

We extend our hearts and hands whenever we have experienced losses, illness and hard times. Without fanfare, our Kehillah responds with embraces, meals, phone calls, one on one help, or just providing a willing ear. With equal fervor, we rejoice and celebrate with each other in our simchas.

Aren't these acts the definition of family, congregation, yidishkeit and kehillah?

"Dear United Synagogue,

Call us what you may - TBO/BT Kehillah or TBO/BT congregation - they both "Я US."

GREAT THINGS ARE HAPPENING IN OUR TEMPLE YOUTH EDUCATION GROUPS!!!!

Our Hebrew High School is under the most capable hands of our teacher Sam Weiner, a junior at Rutgers University. He has involved our students with important topics of Jewish concerns. In one recent session the group viewed a video and was engaged in a vigorous sharing of ideas on Jewish Medical Ethics. Another topic, The Importance of Ritual in Jewish Life, led to an interesting and thought-provoking class. At another session, a young woman, born in the Russia, visited the class and shared stories from her childhood growing up as a Jew. Her talk was followed by an informative discussion with our high school students.

It's a pleasure to see the young people on Monday nights sharing kosher pizza, chips, soda, and ice cream in a relaxed atmosphere, learning and thinking about their Jewish heritage.

If you haven't heard, our Yaldeinu class of younger students has grown by leaps and bounds!! This class has been meeting twice a month on Sunday mornings with our teacher Michal Cohen-Goldstein for the past two years. Michal has been associated with our school for many years and it is a wonder to see her work her magical educational skills, always engaging with the students.

The children are learning about their Jewish culture, holidays, Israel and even bits of Hebrew through storytelling, song, arts and crafts, etc. The interaction is amazing to watch!!

We are planning for the next school year and we will keep you posted.

PURIM EXTRAVAGANZA!

TBO/BT celebrated Purim in grand style with a full Megillah reading by Walter Newman, assisted by Naomi Goldstein and Jake Altholz. Michael Vogel gave a dramatic chapter by chapter explanation as the Purim story unfolded. A magnificent costume parade showed off everyone in his or her Purim best. After the Megillah reading and Havdallah, all partook of a delightful buffet of tasty snacks as Dr. Eric Deutchman entertained on accordion. Topping it all off were tasty hamantaschen and our famous Ice Cream Social courtesy of Myrna & Arny Young. Our USY youth collected a substantial sum for their Tikkun Olam Project, and many purchased half shekels to donate for good causes. And of course, the pasta groggers will find their way to the Yes, We Care Soup Kitchen. All in all, it was a Purim to remember!

SHALOM - JERUSALEM CALLING TBO/BT!

Since moving onto the kibbutz, the general pace and schedule of my life has changed drastically. There's such a relaxed family atmosphere here. Twice a week we barbeque dinner together and our afternoons are spent playing games and reading outside on the grassy fields. It's like nothing else I've ever experienced. A lot of exciting things have been happening lately. Early in March, all of Nativ came back together in Jerusalem for a leadership conference run by Masa. We met kids on other gap year programs, as well as grad students spending time in Israel. Altogether there were about 400 people in attendance. We were divided into groups based on where we will be going to college, so I had the chance to meet other gap year students going to UMD in the fall. We went to seminars on topics such as "Community Innovation" and "Campus Entrepreneurship". We also had programs such as a lecture at Yad Vashem, a trip to the Givat Ram campus of Hebrew University for a social justice workshop with a wheelchair basketball team, and "Open Spaces" with ROI where we got to choose our own discussion topics including naptime, aliyah, and intermarriage and dinosaurs. As if this weren't already enough, a group of eight Nativers and two madrichim came together to record a Kabbalat Shabbat CD for USCJ. We spent about two days practicing and then 13 hours over a two day period in a Jerusalem recording studio. It was an awesome experience. Not only were the melodies we were singing beautiful, the time we spent together as a group was a lot of fun. There was a lot of joking going on to offset the stress of recording. Stay tuned for our CD! After a packed week, we returned to the kibbutz and went back to work. Work in the refet is never dull. There are many cows to be herded and milked, and plenty of new ones on the way. Just a few days ago my fellow refet workers and I got to assist in the birth of a calf. It was so amazing. If anyone is interested in seeing it, there's a video on the Nativmaster youtube channel. However, be warned, it is not for the squeamish. There you can also check out videos of what else is going on with Nativ. Purim is this Saturday night. All of Nativ is meeting up together in Jerusalem for the occasion. I can't wait to see everyone's costumes!
